2. Reason for Revision

In light of recent vibrant market activity, we have revised the average daily trading values and volumes which were the assumptions used in the consolidated earnings forecast in the "Consolidated financial results for Nine months ended December 31, 2013 (Japanese standards), unaudited" announced on January31, 2014 (hereafter "the previous announcement"). Specifically, the consolidated full-year forecast was revised as above based on assumptions of average daily trading values and volumes (change from the previous announcement indicated in parentheses) of ¥2.90 trillion for stocks[*1] (up ¥100 billion), 35,000 contracts for 10-year JGB futures (up 3,000 contracts), 94,000 contracts for TOPIX futures (up 2,000 contracts), 219,000 contracts for Nikkei 225 futures[*2] (up 6,000 contracts), and ¥40.0 billion for Nikkei 225 options (up ¥2.0 billion).

*1 The trading value of stocks listed on the First Section, the Second Section, Mothers, JASDAQ, and the TOKYO PRO Market of TSE (including auction and off-auction trading, as well as those of the former First and Second Sections of OSE).

*2 Includes trading volume of Nikkei 225 futures mini contracts converted to Nikkei 225 futures large-sized contracts.

3. Revised Dividend Forecast

JPX places importance on system development for enhancing competitiveness and self-regulatory functions as an exchange, and also recognizes the importance of maintaining internal reserves for provisions against risks as a clearing organization. Giving due consideration to these aspects, based on our policy of stable and continuous dividend payment, the dividend payout ratio of JPX is targeted at approximately 40%.

In line with the abovementioned policy, year-end dividend forecasts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2014 have been revised as follows due to an expected increase in net income from this revision to the consolidated earnings forecast.

	Dividend per share (yen)
	Second quarter	Year-end (Note)	Annual
Previous forecast		24.00	—
Revised forecast		27.00	—
Actual	80.00

(Note) A 5-for-1 stock split was conducted with an effective date of October 1, 2013. If the increase in the total number of shares due to said stock split is not considered, the year-end dividend forecast will be ¥135.00.
