Note Concerning the Impact of the Novel Coronavirus Outbreak

As the challenges posed by the ongoing global outbreak of novel coronavirus (COVID-19) continue, the DyDo Group is working to fulfill its social responsibility of supplying safe products that inspire customers' peace of mind.

To that end, we're taking steps to ensure robust safety and hygiene management as we continue our business activities in line with national governments' policies and guidelines in Japan and abroad, including at overseas facilities in Turkey and Malaysia.

We are not experiencing any issues related to the stable supply of products at this time.

The Japanese government's declaration of a state of emergency and growing tendency on the part of the Japanese public to limit unnecessary activities outside their homes, as well as lockdowns in numerous countries overseas make it likely that the Group will see declining sales as the domestic and international economies slow down.

It remains unclear when the novel coronavirus outbreak will end, and there is a risk that the company's performance will be further impacted. We will study measures to mitigate that risk while taking a careful look at future developments.

The consolidated financial forecast announced on March 4, 2020, does not take into account the impact of the expanding novel coronavirus outbreak. The company will provide information about major impacts in a timely manner as they become apparent.
