3. Reasons

The Company regards the appropriate return of profits to shareholders as one of the most important management priorities. In order to contribute to sustainable growth and increase in corporate value over the medium to long term, the Company's basic strategy is to balance investment for growth with shareholder returns, while striving to ensure financial soundness.

With regard to the shareholder return policy, the Company will pay dividends aiming for a dividend payout ratio of 40%, and will also conduct the acquisition of treasury shares flexibly, giving overall consideration to its financial position and optimal capital composition, etc. As the Company set the consolidated financial results forecast for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2026, to surpass the latest forecast, it has decided to increase the interim dividend by ¥6 from the previously forecasted ¥17 to ¥23 per share. The Company also plans to increase the year-end dividend by ¥6 from the previously forecasted to ¥23 per share, taking into consideration the full-year financial results forecast and the financial position, etc.
