Japan Lifeline Establishes Information Website for HeartLight Endoscopic Laser Ablation System for Healthcare Professionals

Japan Lifeline Co., Ltd. (“the Company” or “JLL”) is pleased to announce that it has opened a dedicated website to provide information on the HeartLight endoscopic laser ablation system for healthcare professionals on May 29, 2020. The website contains information on the product and its usage.

HeartLight, which has been marketed in Japan since July 2018, is a medical device developed by CardioFocus, Inc. (USA) for the ablation treatment of atrial fibrillation. It is a product that enables a precise treatment using a proprietary combination of an endoscope and laser energy as well as a balloon technology, which is becoming increasingly popular in recent years.

The newly established website is designed to help healthcare professionals better understand and use HeartLight by providing useful information in a timely manner and providing an environment where they can easily access related information at any time.

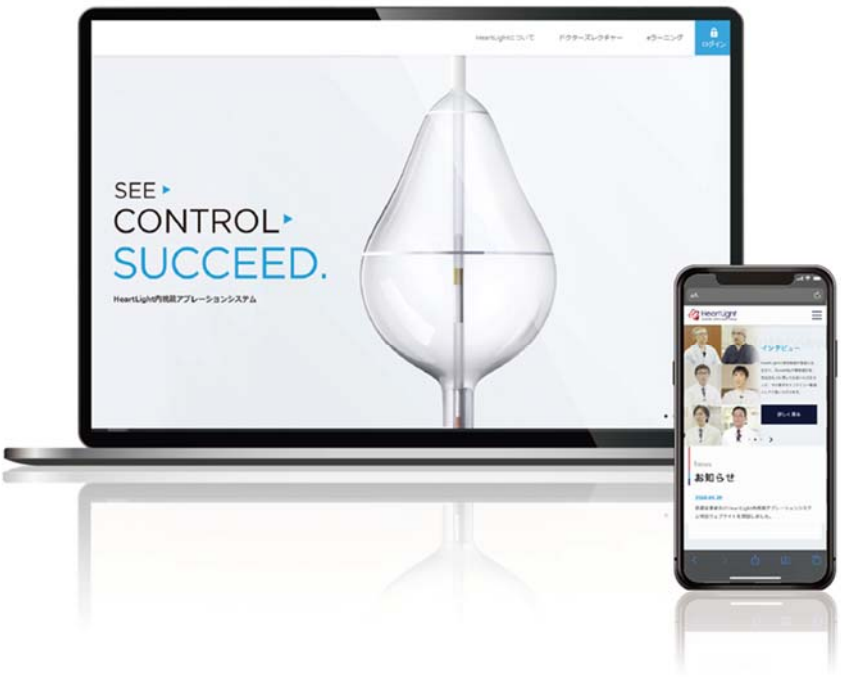

The contents of the website (https://heartlight.jll.jp) include:

- Lectures and video interviews by doctors
- Case reports
- Product overview and clinical results
- Product documentation library
- e-Learning on the proper use of HeartLight
- List of facilities that have adopted HeartLight

*To view all the contents, registration is necessary.

JLL has strived to expand the usage of the endoscopic laser ablation technology as the market authorization holder of HeartLight in Japan. Now that HeartLight X3, the next generation, has already been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the Company is expecting that this advanced technology will be more widely used.

The Company is aiming to expand its options for communication with healthcare professionals through the establishment of this website. Further, it is expecting to enhance the product information so that physicians can provide more patients with a finely tailored treatment, which is possible with HeartLight.
