Notice of Multi-Launch Agreement with Exolaunch and an Additional Launch to AxelLiner Laboratory

We hereby announce that our consolidated subsidiary, Axelspace Corporation (“Axelspace”) is pleased to announce a Multi-Launch Agreement (Agreement) with Exolaunch GmbH (“Exolaunch”), a global launch integrator and leader in launch mission management, satellite integration, and satellite deployment technologies.

The Multi-Launch Agreement will accelerate the growth of Axelspace. In particular, one satellite scheduled for launch under the new Agreement will be used in the AxelLiner business’s in-orbit demonstration service, “AxelLiner Laboratory”. So far, Exolaunch will have secured launches for eight (8) Axelspace’s satellites on the upcoming missions.

We recognize that, amid the recent global increase in demand for satellite launches, securing launch opportunities that can flexibly accommodate desired schedules and orbits is a critical risk with a high potential impact on service execution. Exolaunch, with over a decade of flight heritage and 650+ satellites launched across 40+ missions to date, provides Axelspace with a quick and reliable access to all available global launch opportunities, streamlined launch capacity procurement, comprehensive launch mission management, global logistics, satellite integration, and deployment services.

With this latest launch contract, we now have secured launches for a total of 13 satellites, including eight with Exolaunch.
We will continue to update the latest launch-related information in press releases and financial results materials as appropriate.

As of December 19, 2025, there is no direct capital relationship between the two companies, nor are there any overlapping directors or officers. We have also confirmed that the companies do not qualify as related parties under applicable corporate accounting standards.
