Notice Regarding Acquisition of Shares in Texo Group B.V.
by Our Consolidated Subsidiary, Antalis

We hereby announce that Antalis S.A.S (headquartered in Paris, France; “Antalis”), has acquired all shares of Texo Group B.V. (headquartered in Moordrecht, The Netherlands; “Texo Group”), a company engaged in the visual communication business in the Netherlands and Germany.

1 . Reason for the Business Acquisition

Texo Group is an independent distributor with strong expertise and brand recognition in the field of visual communication across Europe.

The company distributes a wide range of visual communication products across Europe, with a focus on printable textiles. Its product range includes transfer media and papers for garment decoration, sublimation transfer papers, and protection papers. Its core operating company, Texo Trade Services B.V. (Moordrecht, the Netherlands) markets products under the “Texo” brand, which has established a solid presence in the European market and enjoys strong brand awareness in the sector.

This acquisition is part of Antalis’ diversification strategy aimed at transforming its business portfolio—shifting from paper to visual communication—and expanding into new product segments within the visual communication sector, aligning with our group’s Fourth Medium-Term Business Plan. The digital textile printing market in Europe is expected to grow at a robust compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of approximately 7–10% through 2030. Antalis sees this acquisition as a strategic entry into this high-growth sector and an opportunity to strengthen its market presence.

By combining the products and services of both companies, new business opportunities are anticipated. Antalis remains committed to accelerating its efforts toward sustainable growth and enhancing customer value.
