Notice Regarding the Possible Leakage of Personal Information and Other Data Due to Unauthorized Access to Our Media Services

We have confirmed that unauthorized access by a third party occurred at "MINKABU," a wealth-building information media service operated by our Group, and that some users' personal information and other data may have been leaked to external parties. We sincerely apologize to our users and all other parties concerned for the significant inconvenience and concern caused by this incident. The facts identified to date and the status of our response are outlined below.

1. Overview of the Incident

On November 25, 2026, we identified unauthorized use of MINKABU and commenced an investigation on the same day. The investigation revealed that unauthorized access by a third party had occurred in the systems of MINKABU and "MINKABU Asset Planner" (hereinafter referred to as "Asset Planner"), an asset management service, and that personal information and other data held by MINKABU and Asset Planner may have been leaked to external parties.

2. Information Potentially Leaked

The information identified to date is as follows:

- Email addresses: approximately 153,000 records
- Data in Asset Planner believed to relate to linked accounts at financial institutions and other entities, and associated amounts: approximately 19,000 records

The above figures are based on records identified to date and may include duplicates. With respect to passwords, no evidence of leakage to external parties has been identified to date; however, the investigation is ongoing.

Asset Planner is a service that provides a consolidated view of users' asset holdings, transaction histories and changes in asset values over time across accounts at multiple securities companies, banks and other institutions. As the service does not retain the login IDs or passwords required to access accounts at financial institutions, the information leakage in this incident does not in itself directly enable unauthorized withdrawals or transactions in such accounts. However, if email addresses are linked to asset information, such information could be misused for fraudulent investment solicitations tailored to users' financial circumstances or for fraud involving impersonation of financial institutions or other entities.

3. Status of Our Response

To prevent further unauthorized use, we suspended the relevant functions of Asset Planner on November 26, 2026. We are investigating the cause of the incident, among other matters, as well as investigating and addressing security issues in our authentication infrastructure. We will determine whether to resume the service after verifying its security and taking other necessary measures. We will report this incident to the Personal Information Protection Commission and notify affected users on an ongoing basis.

4. Request to Our Users

In connection with this incident, users may receive suspicious emails, SMS messages or other communications impersonating the Company, financial institutions or other entities. We urge users to exercise caution and refrain from accessing URLs or opening attachments in suspicious communications, or entering personal information or authentication credentials. If you notice any unauthorized changes to or use of your account, please contact us using the contact information below.

5. Future Actions

We take this incident very seriously and will work with the relevant service providers and external specialists to investigate its cause and determine the scope of its impact, while taking steps to prevent recurrence and further strengthen our information management framework. Should any new facts be identified through our ongoing investigation, we will promptly announce them.

6. Impact on Financial Outlook

We are currently assessing the impact of this incident on our financial results. Should any matters requiring disclosure arise, we will promptly disclose them.
