Notice Regarding the Commencement of Handling “Antique Violins” to Support Musicians and Contribute to Culture

Financial Partners Group Co., Ltd. (FPG) hereby announces that its subsidiary, FPG Owners Co., Ltd., has commenced handling historically valuable "antique violins" as part of an initiative to support next-generation musicians active globally.

In today’s global economy, holding real assets is attracting attention as part of building a diversified portfolio, and antique violins continue to maintain unique value as one such option. Focusing on their value as real assets, the FPG Group will offer investors a new experience package that combines both the joy of owning a masterpiece of historical significance and the social meaningfulness of acting as a patron supporting next-generation musicians who are active on the world stage.

As the first phase of this project, we will handle an "Andrea Guarneri (c. 1670–75, Cremona)," an instrument stemming from the lineage of Stradivarius. Under the authentication and management of J&A Beare Ltd., a long-established London dealer that continues to lead the global stringed instrument community, this instrument will be loaned to Yurina Arai, a violinist with numerous awards in international competitions, allowing its sound to resonate on global stages. Furthermore, as a special benefit for owners who acquire a fine instrument through this project, we will offer special experiential opportunities, such as hosting private concerts by inviting musicians to perform in salon settings at their homes.

Through these activities, the FPG Group will continue to support next-generation talent and contribute to the succession of arts and culture.
